

Estranged husband of missing mom Jennifer Dulos violated bond conditions by stopping at her memorial, prosecutors say

By Jennifer Henderson, CNN

Fotis Dulos (left), Jennifer Farber Dulos

Fotis Dulos, who is charged with killing his estranged wife, violated the conditions of his bond by stopping at a memorial near his home, where he removed items, prosecutors said.

Dulos, 52, entered a not guilty plea Thursday to the murder, felony murder and kidnapping charges against him in the case of his missing wife Jennifer Farber Dulos. The mother of five, disappeared nearly eight months ago in New Canaan, Connecticut, after she dropped her children off at school.

Her body has not been found but authorities have said they believe she is dead

Fotis Dulos was released on a $6

“ Dulos’ attorney, Norm Pattis, told the judge Dulos made the stops he was allowed to make, which included work-related stops. At the memorial site, Pattis said Dulos “removed items that were there, put there for the purpose of taunting him.” ”

Continued from previous page

million bond earlier this month. At Thursday's hearing, State's Attorney Richard Colangelo said Dulos was allowed to leave his house that day and make three specific stops. But on his way home, Dulos "made an unauthorized stop at the end of his street and moved items from a memorial that was set up there," he said. ■